HOW THREADING WORKS

Threading is a manual technique using a twisted cotton thread to trap and pull hairs from the follicle. It's simple, effective, and requires skillful hand control.

Step summary:

- Technician twists a length of cotton thread into a loop.
- The loop is rolled along the skin to catch and remove hair at the root.
- Technique allows hair-by-hair removal for precise shaping.

Quick facts:

- Typical session: 8–18 minutes, depending on the area.
- No wax, no glue, no chemical residue.
- Great for short, stubborn hairs and detailed shaping.

UNDERSTANDING EYEBROW THREADING

What Is Eyebrow Threading?

Eyebrow threading is a precise hair removal method that uses a thin cotton thread to remove unwanted hair directly from the root. The thread is twisted and moved along the skin to lift hair with control and accuracy.

This method allows technicians to shape eyebrows in detail while preserving their natural fullness. Since no heat or chemicals are used, threading is suitable for most skin types.

Threading is especially useful for:

- Defining clean brow lines
- Removing fine or short hairs
- Creating symmetrical shapes

THE HISTORY OF EYEBROW THREADING

Threading is an ancient technique that originated in South Asia and the Middle East. It has been used for generations as a natural way to groom facial hair and shape eyebrows.

Over time, threading became popular worldwide due to its precision and simplicity. Today, it is widely used in professional salons as a reliable method for brow shaping.

Threading continues to be preferred because it:

- Delivers accurate results
- Avoids chemical exposure
- Works effectively for various skin types
